Where AI meets creativity

Students of B.Voc. (Software Technologies) at Shree Damodar College of Commerce & Economics, Margao recently harnessed the power of Artificial Intelligence (AI) for their graphic design semester-end project. NT KURIOCITY has the details

Also, our college likes to stay up-to-date with the latest technology. Our principal Prita D. Mallya wanted to give our students the chance to learn about AI because it's an exciting and ever-changing field," he says.

Gaundalkar believes that incorporating AI into education will prepare students for the future job market, where AI-driven tools are becoming increasingly prevalent. "We need to equip the next generation with the skills to collaborate effectively with AI systems. The project not only demonstrated the potential of AI in the graphic design field but also sparked a vibrant discussion about the role of technology in the creative process. It's not about replacing artists or graphic designers but augmenting our abilities and expanding our creative horizons," he says.

This project, he adds, has made a big difference in how students see and value AI in being creative. "It helped them see AI as a helpful friend, not a replacement. They understood that AI can help them explore new styles and possibilities they might not have thought of otherwise."

One of the group members, Purva Kamat says that this project helped them learn in-depth about AI image generation and prompt writing. "AI suggests a wide range of colour pallets and schemes which we hadn't considered," she says, adding that challenges they faced in the project included fine-tuning AI algorithms to align with their design goals and content for the magazine.

She further says that AI made it faster to try out different design ideas and see how they worked. "AI as a tool for creativity and efficiency will likely become integral in designing. Additionally, understanding how to fine-tune AI for specific design goals will be a valuable skill and the integration of AI in design education promises to revolutionise how designers approach their art," says Kamat.

As an industry specialist, Gaundalkar says that he wants students to know this process so they can perform better in the future. "I firmly believe that you have to keep yourself updated or you will quickly become outdated," he says.

And as AI continues to advance, teachers he says will play a crucial role in guiding students to harness the power of this technology effectively. However, he says, they will also need to ensure that students don't become overly reliant on AI and lose their own creative intuition and critical thinking skills. "There's a risk that AI might simplify design processes so much that students miss out on learning essential design principles. Striking the right balance between utilising AI as a tool and nurturing individual creativity will be a challenge for teachers. It's important to emphasise that AI should enhance, not replace, a designer's unique touch," he says.

मडगाव, ता.७ (प्रतिनिधी):
शारीरिक तसेच मानसिक आरोग्याची काळजी घेत असताना भावनिक आरोग्याचीही काळजी घ्यावी. शरीर आणि मन याच्यासोबत आपल्या भावनाही तेवढ्याच महत्त्वाच्या आहेत. आजच्या या धकाधकीच्या जीवनशैलीमध्ये माणूस आपल्या भावना कोणासोबत व्यक्त करू शकत नाही. आपल्याच भावनांमध्ये तू गुरफटून जातो. परिणामी माणसाचा राग, आवेश, चिडचिड, संताप वाढत जातो; आणि घरात क्लेश निर्माण होतात. तेव्हा माणसाने कितीही व्यग्र असलो तरीही जवळच्या व्यक्तीसोबत काही वेळ व्यतीत करावा, ज्यामुळे ही स्थिती बदलण्यास मदत होईल, असे प्रतिपादन डॉ. वेदिका वाळके

AI-generated art show at Shree Damodar College, Margao

NT KURIOCITY

The Department of Computer Science, Shree Damodar College of Commerce and Economics, Margao, has organised an AI-generated art exhibition titled 'Pixel Splash', which will be on view until February 24.

Curated by visiting faculty and industry professional Sandesh Gaundalker, he describes it as Goa's first AI-generated art exhibition, challenging traditional notions of creativity and pushing the boundaries of artistic expression. "Capturing the imagination of both art enthusiasts and tech aficionados, 'Pixel Splash' presents a fusion of creativity and technology," he says.

Inaugurated at the college yesterday, the showcase features a diverse array of artworks created by students (Chandrashekhkar Dattatraya Bhat, Savvas Cardoso, Vaishnavi Prabhakar Sawal Sailee Vinod Manjrekar, Showil Egwin Rebello, Shaina Gajanan Kamat, Yogesh Ramesh Yadav, Glyde Rebelo, and Khushal Umesh Naik) from the Department of Computer Science. "Each piece represents a unique exploration of the intersection between human creativity and machine intelligence, inviting viewers to contemplate the evolving relationship between art and technology," says Gaundalker, adding that the concept behind 'Pixel Splash' is to challenge conventional notions of creativity and explore new frontiers in art. "By harnessing the power of AI, our students have created artworks that not only dazzle the senses but also provoke thought and inspire imagination." Reflecting on the exhibition, one participant says, "I never imagined that AI could produce such stunning and thought-provoking artwork. 'Pixel Splash' has truly opened my eyes to the possibilities of AI in the world of art."

Another participant praised the diversity of artworks on display, noting the range of styles and techniques employed by the student artists. "Each piece in 'Pixel Splash' tells a unique story, reflecting the individuality and creativity of its creator. It's incredible to see how AI can be used to produce such a diverse array of artworks."
